A Message from our CEO, Guy Hayward.

Landing on the Board room table, the overpowering question, how do we address the attraction (and retention) of talent challenges?

This is becoming a strategic objective for most organisations and to the benefit of all who seek new opportunities. How can businesses differentiate themselves? By starting a journey of understanding how best they look after their people and creating a working environment that appeals more than others.

When you're looking at where the next chapter of your career is, you should look for businesses that have shown a real commitment to the workplace, modernising the working experience and demonstrating how they will manage your career and give you the tools to perform.

Diversity, Inclusion and Respect. A subject that, when embraced is changing organisations for the better. Seek out businesses that take the subject seriously, who have an awareness of their unconscious bias, underrepresentation, cultural competency and their behaviours and attitudes to create an inclusive culture. It adds an extra dimension to the experience of working.

So, consider your salary yes and this guide will help, but also move to a business that is modern and progressive, embraces an inclusive working environment and invests time in you.

This is where your new opportunity exists!

My Warmest Regards,

Guy
